

Christine Lagarde speaks Communism very well

The beast that was, is not, but shall appear again is resurfacing ...

In a recent press conference at the National Press Club in US, Christine Lagarde proved that she can speak the language of communism extremely well. Not just communism, but she mixes it with occultism (numerology) as well as making very subtle religious references. Her speech starts off with explaining us how important number 7 is in numerology, and also speaks of the past 7 miserable years and 7 good years ahead. Just like in Genesis chapter 41 where Pharaoh has a dream about 7 fat cows and 7 ugly and lean cows which were interpreted by Joseph as 7 good years followed by 7 years of famine.

Besides the fact that is very strange to hear the head of the IMF using numerology in presenting this prestigious' institution economic forecasts for 2014, Christine also got the order of the 7 years wrong - her 7 good years are after the 7 bad years, but we are sure that is just a minor detail.

It could not be clearer that this is more of an occult forecast than an economic one for 2014. But that is not all, her entire speech is all about tackling rising inequality globally, global solidarity, global cooperation etc etc - the usual vocabulary of the modern communist: social justice, economic justice and so forth.

Her assurances that the world economy is on the way to recovery make us feel more relaxed and therefore we tend to believe that what Paul Volker said in 2012 about a possible event around March 2014 is pure fantasy:

Based on the bright picture she presents, we also feel completely at peace and confident that the most important development in financial markets that has started to surface about a massive conspiracy to manipulate gold prices is not really a big deal:

That coming Global Currency Reset, don't worry about it, it's nothing. Just tuning up the global economy a little bit ...
